P2-M bribe try linked to President, Speaker's bid for survival 'Lobbyist' monitors for Kambi

By Herman Bontol and Christine K. Figueroa

A MALACANANG ALLY WAS LINKED YESTERDAY TO ALLEGED BRIBERY attempts to protect President Macapagal-Arroyo from being impeached, as her relationship with Speaker Jose de Venecia sank to the level of what a lawmaker called "mutually assured destruction."

Analysts, Rep. Crispin "Da Jet" Belmont identified lawyer Francis Velasco as a leading official of the lawmaker's publicist, saying Velasco is a lobbyist for Malacanan Palace, or the person who allegedly offered him P1 million to get him to sign a "blank" impeachment complaint against the President.

In a telephone interview, Belmont claimed that he is a lobbyist who is offered him cash to influence the complaint. He said he made the offer to Belmont in the context of the opposition lawmakers' demand the impeachment case—filed by former law professor—was a bribe to be thrown out of the House of Representatives.

House rules bar the filing of a complaint against a member of the House of Representatives from a more serious impeachment case that may be lodged against him in connection with the scandal-ridden National Unification Network (NUN) deal with China's CCTV Corp.

Mr. Belmont, secretary general of Kambi, denied he ever offered money to Belmont.

Malacanan Palace, however, has "mutually assured destruction" allegations that one of its allies was involved in attempts to bribe law students, and said Mr. Belmont would not be dismissed from his job of running the network. (See related story on Page A25).

GMA, JDV: Our coalition won't break

By Christine Q. Arellano and Herman Bontol

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-ARROYO and Speaker Jose de Venecia yesterday agreed to form a coalition to ensure and spread their would not allow the ruling coalition to break up.

The two top leaders of the Liberal coalition and about 25 top administration officials of the House of Representatives met in a roundtable lunch at Malacanan Palace.

"I said and said, President Arroyo, it was made clear today that we are not going to be ousted," said Majority Leader Jesus Dela Cruz of the Senate.

He said it was the decision of all those present, particularly the President and the Speaker. "I said that we are not going to be ousted," he said.

SOME P329 MILLION WORTH of textbooks, information and communication technology (ICT) products, computers and instructional materials are lying around in the offices of school officials or in warehouses, according to audit, according to the Commission on Audit (COA).

In its 2006 audit report on the Department of Education, the COA disclosed that 2.5 million copies of textbooks on instructional materials costing almost P100 million have remained unutilized for many months, leaving them rotting in warehouses.

"One inspection of materials included in the school or division offices in 11 regions disclosed that there were textbooks that were not

Family, not sex, is Pinoys' No. 1 source of happiness

By Ryan Pineda

Reporter/Researcher

FAITH, HEALTH AND RELIGION ARE the three most important sources of happiness among Pinoys, while sex, sports, politics and cultural pursuits rank among the least important, according to a recent study by the National Statistical Coordination Board (NSCB).

But according to the study, the least important source of happiness was sex, which ranked last. "It is not that the respondents were just too shy to reveal their true feelings about sex," the study said.

It said it was the decision of all those present, particularly the President and the Speaker. "I said that we are not going to be ousted," he said.

Heartbreak can kill, study proves, sort of LONDON—IT HAS BEEN THE STUFF OF ROMANCE novels and Hollywood films, and doctors have long suspected it.

A study of 7,000 patients and events has at last established it is possible to die of a broken heart from a bad breakup as well as from other relationships that have gone sour.

The study, reported in Monday's edition of Internal Medicine, found that men and women who had a recent breakup had a 24 percent increase in the risk of dying from heart disease.

The study found that the people with the worst intimate relationships, chances of a heart attack or other heart trouble rose by 24 percent compared to people on good terms with their spouses, partners, relatives and friends.

What it likely leads closer to is a better understanding of emotional relationships and well-being and its role in health problems.

"A person's heart health can be as much affected by negative intimate relationships," the researchers wrote. "We showed that the

PCGG chief probed on P10-M advances

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION on Good Government, Corbin Sison, is being investigated by the Presidential Anti-Graft Commission, over cash advances amounting to P10.35 million that he allegedly made from a dummy corporation set up by the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos.

The cash advances, which were allegedly made over a period of nine months in 2006, in the form of several checks issued by the Mid-Pang Land Development Corp., were not part of official PCGG transactions, documents from the PACGC said.

In an interview yesterday, Sison said he was informed of the investigation and was ready to cooperate with the PACGC.

The PACGC then said the money was not for personal use but was for the company. He said he was confident that his name would be cleared. "I am a clean person," he said.

Mid-Pang Land is the registered owner of the 14.8-hectare "Pangasinan" in Pangasinan, a group of companies that Chinese-Filipino businessman Alex Pan Cuyayan, a close friend of Sison, is the majority owner. The company was one of the properties acquired by the PCGG after the 1986 people power revolution.

Cops, again, say they'll go after cars with sirens

By Kim Panlilio

THE PHILIPPINE NATIONAL POLICE (PNP) is cracking down on motorists who use alarm, blinkers, and emergency flashers to evade traffic rules and regulations.

Chief Superintendent Perfecto Dela Cruz, head of the PNP's Traffic Management Group (TMG), said the bureau that he is planning to issue orders to the police to stop the use of alarm, blinkers, and emergency flashers on vehicles with expired license plates and colored stickers for their license plates. The bureau will then be conducted by the TMG.

He said he and his team will come out on Monday in full force to enforce these orders. "Let this serve as a warning to motorists to take care of their license plates from their vehicles by then," Dela Cruz said.

from the property to the PCGG.

Sison is a director of Mid-Pang Land, along with PCGG commissioners Ricardo Alcala and Simon Javier.

According to the documents, Sison was due to receive P50.55 million from Mid-Pang Land representing P23.4 million in cash advances on the Pasing property and P16.5 million proceeds from the sale of A. Santos Corp. shares.

His official statement to the PCGG made on Nov. 27, 2006, amounted only to 19.9 million while P10.35 million was claimed from his bank.

Questionable

Transactions in the PCGG normally go to the National Treasury as by law all revenues it gets are to go to the Treasury of the Commonwealth Government (TCM).

Sison's questionable transactions allegedly started on Feb. 14 and lasted through Dec. 5.

The amounts were reflected as cash advances by Sison in his capacity as Mid-Pang Land director, as follows: P1 million (Feb. 14); P1 million (March 10); P2 million (March 10); P5 million (April 21); and P7 million (May 21).

The PACGC issued its investigation last year after Mid-Pang Land made its official statement to the PCGG.

In April 2007, the PACGC asked the IRC, Mid-Pang Land's mother company, to submit the pertinent documents to it. Aristotle A. Alcala license plates, Pinal said any car or vehicle that obstructs the view of the license plates will also be confiscated.

Pinal also expected the mounting pressure to report to the TMG motorists on the road using alarm, blinkers and the newer horned horns through cellphone number 0922-2400073. "The public can report to us any motorists using these items and we will take action and go after those vehicles."

The TMG head also said that as of the present, only the following commemorative plates are allowed to be used by the Land Transportation Office (LTO): the 10th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 50th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 100th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 150th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 200th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 250th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 300th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 350th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 400th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 450th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 500th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 550th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 600th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 650th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 700th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 750th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 800th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 850th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 900th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 950th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30; the 1000th Anniversary plates which expire on Oct. 30.

Aiko: I Went From a 37 to a 32-Inch Waistline!

"I never thought I'd end up being overweight. I used to be thinner in my younger years. When I gained weight and went up to a 37-inch waistline, my life changed. I started losing weight projects. People would come up to me and tell me I was fat. It really made me lose my confidence. I had lost weight before but when I gained more weight again, it was twice of what I lost before. As for diet... you know it, I've tried it. I just kept losing and gaining again. Then Dawn (Gibala), who's a close friend, recommended Marie France. I was encouraged by her weight loss success story. I started going regularly and so far I've already dropped down to a 32-inch waistline! It's all a work in progress but so far I feel better because I know I look slimmer and healthier!"

COA finds P329-M textbooks unused

By Joseph R. ...

... of ensuring that textbooks should be in the hands of students," said the report.

An inventory of these books revealed that in Metro Manila alone, more than 500,000 copies amounting to P42 million have yet to be issued to students, while more than 200,000 textbooks were still unissued in Eastern Visayas (Region 8).

Wasted with errors

Explaining the "monstrous waste" of these textbooks, the DepEd said the bulk of these books ended in all the regions, except Region III (Region 3), and not only with the correct education curriculum and the minimum learning competencies.

In the four regions—Metro Manila, Central Luzon (Region 3), Eastern Visayas (Region 8)—the books were added with local and grammatical errors. In Metro Manila, ZTE officials said of textbooks purchased by the Department of Education, they placed the material in the shelves.

Other reasons provided by the DepEd included the refusal of teachers to accept these books for fear of liability for losses, the books could not be used on a 1:1 basis, and the purchase was expensive.

"The textbooks were produced even if there is not enough with the revised basic education curriculum. Thus, the use of waste materials was not maximized resulting in an enormous waste of government funds in the amount of P300,000,000," the COA said.

Monitoring needed

The COA said the DepEd should determine the actual textbook situation, which would form the basis for the preparation of an education aid distribution list, and monitor distribution.

It also recommended that permanent personnel be involved in procuring and distributing books and materials must be provided against diversion of the books sold by the government.

The COA report also highlighted the P329-M million worth of computers which were either repaired, missing or destroyed due to lack of technical assistance and facilities to operate the computers.

The bulk of these ICT packages worth

P115 million was being used for administrative purposes.

Each package consisted of 340 units of computers, computer class (CCL), workbooks and teacher's materials in side of its acquisition for English, Math and Science for elementary schools, and English, Chemistry and Geography for high school.

The package was delivered to eight school divisions in Western Visayas (Region 6) between 2001 and 2002.

Based on the COA inspection, 200 of these computers were found in disrepair, principal's offices and were being used for preparing reports and financial statements instead of for educational purposes. (These units have been sent to be repaired.)

Teacher training

The COA said this by saying that the computer supplier did not provide the teachers training to operate the computers. It also said classroom of the COA activities be installed.

Some principals explained that they kept these computers in their offices because it was not safe and that they could not use up a laboratory for lack of air-conditioned rooms, maintenance funds and technical assistance.

In Eastern Visayas, 500 units, amounting to about P14.7 million of ICT equipment, and 300 units with value of about P10 million were found in disrepair.

Some P8 million worth of computer equipment bought out of the Priority Development Assistance Fund went unused in a regional office in Cebu City.

"The regional computer textbooks were not appropriate for the schoolchildren's required level of competence. Thus, some ICT hardware and software and instructional materials have not been used," the COA said.

Flawed CDs

A further audit said more government funds worth P400,000 were wasted on flawed CDs.

The COA also reported that books had already been issued to schools in Region III to some P14 million worth of P14 million of instructional materials (textbooks and CDs).

It cited the real weakness in the process in allowing the issuance for the accumulation of books in these materials.

Also, defective P18 million have been provided to teachers for their classrooms. These plans could not be repeated "due to unavailability of spare parts in the market, obsolescence and lack of funds for repair," it said.

STOP THE WITCH-HUNTS, FOCUS ON LOCAL AUTONOMY & ECO GROWTH

As the nation observes this week another anniversary of the Local Government Code, we, the members of the League of Provinces of the Philippines (LUPP), underscore the urgency for Congress to seriously consider reform legislation on further devolution of political and fiscal autonomy to local government units (LGUs) in sync with the spirit and intent of this landmark law.

With the economy on the upswing, the Senate, or the whole Congress for that matter, should give a long hard look at the Local Government Code and see what fine-tuning or new measures are needed to further devolve political and fiscal autonomy to LGUs.

Such a review is necessary at this juncture to make sure that the economic bonanza that the Philippines is starting to enjoy would, in the long run, truly trickle down to the provinces instead of being concentrated in the so-called "Imperial Manila" alone as what had happened in previous boom cycles.

We are thus calling on the honorable members of the Senate to end their long-winded investigations into the cancelled National Broadband Network (NBN) contract of the ZTE Corp. and the revived "Halo, Gato" controversy as they could instead focus on more urgent concerns such as further reforms on local autonomy to enable the countryside to reap the full benefits of the nascent economic turnaround on the Arroyo watch.

These investigations have already lost relevance in the light of succeeding developments and given the increasing public perception that there have turned into thirty-year-old springboards for the 2010 political agendas of certain legislators and opposition leaders.

With regard to the ZTE-NBN inquiry, we see no need for our senators to summon, much less subpoena, First Gentleman Jose Miguel Arroyo, newly re-nominated Comelec chairman Benjamin Abalos and former economic planning secretary Bernaldo Neri, considering that the probe has been rendered moot by Malacañang's cancellation of the broadband contract itself and Abalos' decision to step down ahead of his scheduled retirement in 2008.

Save for the extensive media linkage that senators are likely to harvest in forcing the First Gentleman to appear before the chamber, there is actually no need for him to appear before the Senate because the supposed whistleblowers—former Senator Jose "Joey" de Venecia III—had categorically stated in the first Senate hearing that neither President Arroyo nor her husband was involved in the NBN project.

Given for the inquiry into the allegation of ex-1st Sgt. Vidal Doble that the military bought the telephone conversations of former Comelec chairman Virgilio Calacandian and President Arroyo herself during the 2004 election campaign season, given that Doble has already been unmasked in the Senate hearings as a perjured witness and that no other person had testified to corroborate his wild charges of wiretapping.

Our continuing consultations with our respective constituents indicate that an overwhelming majority of our people now view these Senate hearings as witch-hunts and orchestrated back jobs on the Arroyo presidency. The ever-growing public disenchantment with these investigations can best be gleaned from last weekend's call by no less than Cebu Archbishop Ricardo Cardinal Vidal for a halt to the ZTE-NBN inquiry on the ground that the senators have become too "personal" and were going out of the ambit of the contract itself in their grilling.

So rather than squander precious congressional hours on investigations that most Filipinos now see, not as "in aid of legislation" but "in aid of reelection or in presidential ambitions," our senators could better spend their time attending to priority measures that would sustain—and accelerate—the turnaround of the economy, brought about by the macroeconomic reforms put in place by the President since she took over in 2001.

ROTC restoration opposed

THE DECADE-LONG SUICIDE OF STUDENTS that killed in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps program has prompted renewed efforts to once again make it mandatory (House HR 100, pending to repeal Republic Act 6425 [ROTC Act of 2001], has been filed before the House Committee on National Defense by Lt. Sen. Eduardo Cojuangco — a move hailed by some as the "Duterte Doctrine" on ROTC).

What students take in reception is the fact that we teachers are representing our opposition to the NCTE by producing a journal in another journal, such as the On the Writing Yearning: we are (NCTE) under the National Service Training Program (NSTP). Called that a job without even considering a key-noteholder in the house, which was, obviously.

Although we get perhaps—which is understandable considering that a fast-food restaurant is not there a decade ago—the CWTS has taught members and has made members pro-faster nations than we probably could have been here, but we cannot see the CWTS program. We prefer to teach past children or could learn for the world past the peak, up and march around campus. The CWTS has also reported as to the health issues and personal problems that plague us. Many of us, however—mostly poverty, miserable education, and ill health.

We ask, what can we learn from the ROTC entry teacher as the use of violence against our classmates is related to social "discipline," but that discipline surely comes from here. It makes students docile, selfless, even as critical, consider the ROTC slogan, "Ours first before your complaint." The idea here contains, requires that the ROTC program is being used by the Armed Forces of the Philippines to control, discipline, to develop and train them.

work, which opens the membership and activities of progressives and national groups.

The government, but been as inspiring as it is small in the EEC, and having in its large public facilities, massive physical plant and other characteristics the have defined the EEC's program, seems to have forgotten that there was once a Black Church who had made the hands of its officers for housing widespread as expressed in its university's (ECC) program. We do not see any other Black Church.

Producers claim that the decreasing number of workers offshore in the country is liable to stall, saying it has "serious consequences in ensuring our national security and stability" but they believe otherwise. "We do not want to become 'cannon fodder' in the shape war being waged by our government against the people. We do not want to become just an establishment that is being used by the government to go on organizations, the members of which are not Americans and British. We do not want to be career officers of a military that is being used to claim the lives of innocent civilians whose only crime is to fight for their nation."

Soldiers pulled out of Basilan to fight NPA

LAGAITH CITY—REGIONAL police and military units have pulled forces to scramble the anti-insurgency campaign in the island of Basilan as a joint military-military group (TUG) at Camp Cebu has been ordered.

The TUG will coordinate the action plan and organize personnel between the two parties in preparation for the upcoming elections and strengthening the military (MIL) elements.

This will include the mobilization of forces to pull out troops from Basilan for deployment to the 10th Infantry Division (ID) in Zamboanga City, said regional police spokesperson, Colonel Diego, Elmer Bano.

"Insurgents will be pulled out from Basilan and deployed to Basil, considering the activities done by local communist rebels here, more so with the death-squad element," he said.

Although the damage wrought by the New People's Army to the local government has been minimal, it is still highly active in the region, he added.

Two companies from Basilan have already been deployed to area for an honest, clean and peaceful election," Bano said.

Maj. Gen. Jeffrey Sison, commanding general of the 10th ID, said the AFP would be providing checkpoints throughout the region during the elections. They will also utilize available manpower in the campaign against the communist attack by reorganizing the General Arsenio Delgado (GAD) Armed Forces (AF) units (GADAF) across Basilan. One additional platoon will be deployed to Marikina, and another company and platoon group to Zamboanga.

Basilan prepared for the deployment of soldiers, specifically to secure areas prone to attacks from land-based elements, such as communication cell sites, mining sites, and electric and telegraph facilities.

Workers fear closure of steel firm

GAIAH CITY—THE LACK of the necessary financial resources of steel-making companies on Saturday raised concerns over the possible mass layoff of hundreds of its workers with the imminent closure of its facilities in Baguio, Benguet.

In a statement sent to the business, the union of Steel Corporation of the Philippines (SCP) said its fear stemmed from the closure of Baguio Regional Trial Court Judge Ma Cecilia Acuña to install a management committee to oversee the company's rehabilitation.

Surprise

The Steel Corp. Labor Union Philippine Transport and General Workers Organization (SGU-PGWU) said Acuña's ruling would only pave the way for the supposed planned closure of the company's Baguio-De La Union Road.

"We initially thought that the rehabilitation issue was meant to lessen the financial condition of the company but we were surprised to learn that it had now become a change of ownership and management... It is now a corporate affair," the statement, written in English, read.

The group said that since the new management took over, it would only lead to the closure of the whole facility.

This would then provide the opportunity for the management committee to facilitate the selling of the steel firm to the bank which, in turn, would allow its new owners to recognize the company, including its employees, the union said.

Precedent

It said close events preceded the closure of the factory of Baguio Steel Corp. In nearby Cebu, a steel firm was closed.

"Just like with the Baguio Steel, the financial losses of SCP may start with the company being sold and liquidated. In this situation, it will be the workers and their families who will be at the losing end," the union said. SCP, which supplies more than half of the country's demand for steel roofing and GI sheets, has been under receivership and rehabilitation after suffering heavy losses since the 1997 Asian financial crisis.

The company, owned by Sheng Uy was put under rehabilitation after liquidation-PCI filed that a case in 2000 before Acuña, who when it failed to pay to P1.5 billion debt to the bank.

New owners

SCP, owned by industrial tycoon and shopping mall magnate Henry Uy has acquired Philippine-PCI Bank.

Union officers said this group was then in a state of uncertainty by converting SCP/PCI (Basilan) to get hold of 50 percent of ownership.

"Shutting a steel company is not the business of the bank. And putting in a new management only only aggravates SCP's present financial condition," the group argued. Marlon Bano, Inspector General for the

The Senate has demanded that both sides accept the Manila-ECU meetings, an earlier of events leading to the ECU approval, a number of projects from 2005 to 2007 and the government's lack of interest in other major projects such as the Manila Road Tunnel and Light Rail Transit.

Unsettled questions

Issues were raised when Sen. Raul S. Dela Cruz, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Higher Education, Science and Technology, said the ECU project was not a government project but a private project, and that the government's lack of interest in other major projects such as the Manila Road Tunnel and Light Rail Transit.

Under Executive Order No. 404, the President is to give the role of the President in approving the ECU deal. But the President's role is to approve the executive department from transferring to Congress without the permission of the President.

The Senate also wants to know why the government made a loan policy that was not in the ECU project, which was supposed to be a loan policy under the government's policy.

Resolution of Support to Administrator Orlando C. Hondrade

Whereas, a case had been filed against UGWA Administrator Orlando C. Hondrade by the Presidential Anti-Grift Commission (PAGC) with respect to the emergency rehabilitation of the Untay Dam / Tunnel in 2004-2005, and a decision was recently handed down by the Office of the President;

Whereas, we are active players in the water industry and are, thus, familiar with this arrangement between Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System and its concessionaires, Manila Water and Maynilad, in regards the operation and maintenance of water distribution and other facilities, including funding for the repair and rehabilitation of these facilities;

Whereas, a review of the facts of the case would yield that Administrator Hondrade only acted with circumspect and dispatch to prevent an imminent water crisis in Manila and nearby areas due to the combined effects of the El Niño phenomenon and the destruction of the Untay Dam by typhoon Wmaw in December 2004, that prevented water to flow into the Angat Dam;

Whereas, in an effort of such destruction, President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo instructed Administrator Hondrade to ensure that the clearing of the Untay tunnel and the emergency repairs of the damaged dam should be immediately completed not later than 14 March 2005;

Whereas, Administrator Hondrade, in his capacity then as MWSS Administrator, coordinated with Maynilad and Manila Water for the immediate clearing of the area and the de-clogging of the tunnel as well as the urgent repair of the damaged facilities;

Whereas, Maynilad Water and Manila Water shouldered, on a 50-50 basis, all the expenses for the clearing operation and immediate repairs of the Untay dam, in accordance with duly executed agreement with MWSS and in line with the "provisional" of certain MWSS functions; and that no government funds nor taxpayer money were ultimately spent on this;

Whereas, Adm. Hondrade satisfactorily complied with the instruction of the President, and 118 days before her death, "Untay" water began to flow into Angat Dam and the impending water crisis was effectively prevented;

Whereas, we have fully known Administrator Hondrade, based on our individual and collective experience with him, to be a man of action and very prudent-minded of existing government rules—in everything he does as a government official;

Wherefore, he is merited, as it is hereby resolved, that we, members and / or participants in the Philippine Water Works Association (PWMA) National Convention held at Parnis Princess, Palawan on October 3-4, 2007, hence pass this Resolution of Support and that copies of this Resolution be published in newspapers of general circulation so that the public may know the truth.

Signed, this 1st day of October, 2007, by the following persons and entities:

(The following section contains numerous handwritten signatures and names of individuals and organizations, including the Philippine Water Works Association (PWMA) National Convention, and various water utility companies and associations.)

Fate of CHED execs in call center mess up to COA

By Remy E. Eustanado

THE COMMISSION ON GOVERNMENT ACCOUNTABILITY (COGA) will not act against CHED officials involved in the alleged irregularities in the agency's PGC call center contract. The COGA was leaving it to the Commission on Audit to recommend what charges should be filed against the officials, said CHED chief Ricardo Peralta. Peralta said he would refer to the COA a report on the project issue by a CHED investigating team. The probe team has confirmed reports of irregularities in connection with the project, known as Integrated Multiple Business Process Outsourcing Services for Call Center (IMBPO-SCC). Services provided further project, which participants pending results of the CHED investigation. The CHED commissioner Ricardo Peralta dismissed the report as an official. He said there was no evidence in the report that "no one individual."

Call center lab
 He and two other commissioners, Lanting Linao and Reynaldo Delacruz, and members of the project should continue. The project is aimed at helping state universities and colleges to set up their own call center training laboratories. According to the CHED allegedly joined up the cost of the project by allowing schools to build separate buildings for the call center laboratories, according to CHED staff members. The same sources and the commission also alleged a leak of the project's budget to the same source. Philippine University of the Philippines is among the original plan to set up call center laboratories in at least 20 state universities and colleges nationwide. CHED leaders also questioned the 17 members of the contract, to a contract team led by a former CHED chairman, the only one presided by the CHED board and executive committee (BAC) in October 2004. Peralta, who was asked by CHED commissioner Ricardo Peralta to have the project investigated, himself the BAC for not declaring a failed bid. "There were grounds to do so. Given the magnitude of the project, it would have been incumbent to do so," he said. The BAC is headed by Peralta, with Peralta, deputy executive director with Felipe Mares, as vice chair and Regina Peralta, Peralta's sister and former CHED chair, as members. Peralta's sister denied allegations that she had rigged the bidding in favor of a former CHED chairman.

Overpricing
 The investigating team's report said that overpricing in the construction of the call center buildings intended to house call center laboratories. It said the PGC and per square meter cost of the new call center building to be put up at the Polytechnic University of the Philippines in Alabang, Manila, was overpriced. The normal cost of building similar similar buildings is only PGC per square meter, said the CHED investigators. Aside from overpricing, only one group, the BAC, also failed to consider the questions raised by its combined working group (CWC) on the eligibility documents submitted by the bidders. The BAC also disregarded questions raised about the qualifications of bidders, members of the commission, Information Management Computer Control, the PGC's chief.

Hero's welcome awaits Manny in Manila

Victory parade set; champ's debt payments to city can wait—Lim

By Allison W. Lopez

A HERO'S WELCOME IS JUST AROUND the corner for Manny Pacquiao as he returns from the Manila City government after his debut Sunday at Shikara Sports Arena.

Mayor Alfredo Lim said yesterday that while the city government wants to host a victory parade for Pacquiao, it will not consider the P200,000 in compensation he has for the city.

The boxer used to own a bar—the Goodwin Bar—in Baywalk, which Lim had since closed of all establishments.

Lim said the city government will pay for the boxer's travel expenses, but the boxer's debt to the city is still a problem.

"If we consider his debt, the exercise of other establishments may tell us that they are also not going to pay their debts. That's about P7 million worth of collections. The amount we are paying is million from Manny in total," said Lim.

The mayor, however, added that he was giving Pacquiao the benefit of the doubt since it was possible that the

The South of France: Inevitable attack remains in the air

Jurors retrace Diana's final Paris journey

PARIS—JURORS BY THE hundreds retraced the final journey of Princess Diana on Monday, concluding with a visit on foot to the scene of her fatal crash in a central Paris suburb.

On the first day of a two-day visit, the 11 men and women were driven by coach through the French capital, accompanied by the coroner in charge of the case—Lord Justice Greville—and a team of court officers, lawyers and journalists.

At the Alma hotel, police halted traffic as the 50-strong party descended the road on foot. They spent 15 minutes in the courtyard, stopping for his longest period at the court gate—the 12th pillar—where the accident took place.

Later in the evening they followed for a second time the route taken by Diana and her boyfriend Dodi Fayed, who were killed along with chauffeur Robert Paul in the crash on Aug. 31, 1997.

This time they observed the crash scene by night from outside the hotel, and spent some 20 minutes watching the post-mortem of traffic flow.

The impact, which began last week, is into the circumstances of the crash. Two official investigations—one by France and Britain—have concluded it was caused by speed and drunk driving. But allegations of a secret murder plot have never been laid to rest.

The purpose of the two-day visit to Paris was to allow jurors to familiarize themselves with the scene of the accident and of events leading up to it.

After being flown to their own charter jet, the jurors set off in the early afternoon from the first hotel, the proximity of Fayed's father, Mohamed M. Fayed.

They were each given folders including maps and satellite images of central Paris, detailing the route taken by the blowaway limousine and other key places.

Musharraf handpicks loyalist as successor

ISLAMABAD—GENERAL PERVEZ MUSHARRAF has handpicked a loyalist and former opponent as deputy prime minister, signaling his intention to increase his hold on the military in a key step to securing civilian rule.

Gen. Asif Ali Zia, who has helped Musharraf's rise to power against Taliban and al-Qaida militants and has represented the president in crucial political negotiations, took up the post on Monday with a wave of military pomp.

Musharraf, a key US ally, had promised to step down as head of the Islamic republic's nuclear-armed military if he won another five-year term in a general election on Saturday.

He won by a landslide, but still has not at least one day for the Supreme Court to rule on the legality of the election by the national parliament and provincial assemblies before the result is acknowledged.

Zia, the former head of the army, has been in charge of the armed forces since he was sworn in as prime minister in the previous city of Islamabad, near the capital Islamabad, a military statement said.

"A ceremony was held at the general headquarters in Islamabad to welcome the newly appointed deputy prime minister on his assuming charge of his new appointment," the statement said.

Nobel Prize for Medicine 2007

Gene targeting in mice has led to insights into diseases like Alzheimer's and cancer

Three share Nobel Prize for landmark gene technique

TWO AMERICANS AND A Brit won the 2007 Nobel Prize in medicine for developing the technique for inserting "transgenic" technology into cells, allowing scientists to create animal models of human diseases in mice.

The winners, who will share the $1.54 million prize, are Mario R. Capecchi, 70, of the University of Utah in Salt Lake City; Oliver Smithies, 82, of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill; and Sir Martin J. Evans, 66, of Cardiff University in Wales.

Other scientists are applying this technology to diseases as gene targeting, a variety of ways, from bone marrow to the development of new therapies, and the United Kingdom from the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council.

The biotechnology prize, awarded for the first time, is a new prize for biology and what are now given more often. It allows them to potentially explore a new area of science with the prize.

P308-M payday for Pacquiao

By the Inquirer Sports Desk

LAS VEGAS—MANNY Pacquiao earned a whopping $7 million (P308 million) from his recent fight with Mexican legend Marco Antonio Barrera, according to a source close to the Filipino ring celebrity.

The source, who is part of Pacquiao's entourage in the United States, said the total being collected is much smaller than the $10 million to $12 million from United States pay-per-view sales and another $2 million from his share of the live pay-per-view price.

The fight co-promoters, Top Rank and Golden Boy Promotions, officially pegged Pacquiao's fight price at $12 million.

The source, however, said Pacquiao was assured of no less than "very close to $1 million" after his change of venue to the Las Vegas fight to take two conditions.

Meanwhile, the Promoters could be looking for a single fight, saying a rematch among a slew of other fighters to look a wider appeal to the public.

Another Team Pacquiao source said there are plans to increase to at least four per year.

the number of times he fights in the next two years. And the rule itself will be normally pay live-time fight could increase to a maximum.

The living conditions in Pacquiao's next two, though, a World Boxing Council lightweight boxing world title.

"I would like to go up to the 120-lb division and challenge David Diaz for his WBC title," Pacquiao told Filipino reporters after a Masaya and Monday made his sign on the first floor of The Hotel Las Vegas.

"Then I could go down starting to 110 pounds to fight somebody," he added, saying the door to a possible rematch with WBC super featherweight king Austin Martin. It is the fight against Diaz, though, that promises a hefty payday for the Filipino.

Senior Pacquiao manager Freddie Roach said—after the Filipino was his coach against Erik Morales in Southern California—that his living expenses would move to the next level of his professional fight days. He also said Pacquiao could be eligible for $1 million per year.

The other fighters who want to be Pacquiao's next foe include WBA super featherweight champion Edwin Valdez, WBO super featherweight king Jose Luis Estrada, WBA lightweight champion Juan Diaz, WBO lightweight king Michael Sprott, and WBA/J super featherweight champion Chris Eubank. DOE seeks ways to temper hike in local oil prices

Peso rise not enough to offset increases in crude prices

By Miguel L. Ho

THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY IS CONSIDERING implementing various measures that will alleviate the impact of the escalating world oil prices on local gasoline prices.

These measures may include a possible cut in the tariff on imported crude and refined petroleum products.

Energy Secretary Nene Bersa said these are not issues that his government could do in terms of tempering the rise in pump prices in that view the trend of global forces.

Bersa said that since the domestic oil industry is fragmented, the government could not intervene with industry players in such the price setting.

The strengthening of the peso against the greenback, he said, was likewise not enough to offset the rise in oil prices since more was in the world market.

What the government could do, he explained, was to implement temporary measures that could make use of factors that the government could control.

One possible measure, Bersa said, was to encourage retailers to do something that was put in place from before.

NETED

November last year, which reduced the tariffs on crude and refined petroleum products using existing specific "top tier" prices.

"We will discuss that with the Department of Finance," Bersa said.

Under Executive Order 127, due to its on crude and refined petroleum products are subject to a percentage point increments when regional prices hit certain "trigger" amounts.

Under the implementing rules of the EO, the mandated 3-percent tariff will go down to 2 percent if the regional benchmark index crude hits $16 a barrel, and based on the basis of Punta Lagunas (BOLSA) benchmark for finished products under $100 a barrel.

The price levels should have been reached for the past two weeks to merit a two-percent tariff.

The next trigger points, which will bring the tariff to 1 percent, are $75 a barrel for bolso crude and still $80 a barrel for BOLSA-based fuel.

The import tariff will be scrapped if bolso crude hits $65 a barrel and BOLSA-based fuel $70 a barrel.

As of Oct. 8, bolso crude hit an average of $73.72 a barrel, up from $73.16 a barrel two weeks.

The price of BOLSA-based diesel moved to an Oct. 8 average of $83.61 a barrel from $82.81 a barrel two weeks.

Netopia ties up with e-learning firm

By Ben C. Chabon

THE NETOPIA BUREAU call franchise has partnered with education technology company E-Learning Systems Limited (ELSL) to offer the English-based training program to the customers market.

Under the partnership, ELSL will provide the English-based program called EnglishLink through a website while Netopia will act as a personal coach and classroom.

There are about 300,000 people currently working in 120 countries outside in the country.

The industry is growing due to 2007, more than one million Filipinos will be working in the call center industry, generating $12 billion.

However, industry data is skewed due to the 300,000 new graduates looking for work, nearly only 2,000 per cent are hired in business process outsourcing (BPO) companies and call centers.

In addition, only 10-15 per cent of graduates pass their communication exams.

The next 20 candidates could have been hired had they not failed in EnglishLink. ELIS is www.englishlink.com

"Call centers use EnglishLink to train their employees by using EnglishLink," EnglishLink said.

Netopia is already providing its clients with online courses from NetopiaCall, Total Communications Services, and Customer Standard Learning.

It also provides the online program 2007. EnglishLink is a strategic ally.

Netopia officials and EnglishLink is a strategic ally, and to their service because it offers more open opportunities for English learners to succeed in any Netopia business.

Local cable group bucks PLDT's mobile TV offering

Files formal complaint with NTC

By Riet T. Calubanas

THE PHILIPPINE Cable Television Association (PCTA) has moved to block the Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. group's mobile TV service called myTV, but will be opposing the NTC price of Globe Telecom Inc.

PCTA has close to 300 members, including first cable. "We submitted our complaint to the NTC National Telecommunications Commission yesterday," PCTA president Allan Dargasa told the Inquirer.

He said that among the many issues which the cable group has against myTV was that it uses ITT's 20-cent terrestrial television rates for handheld handsets.

"That is essentially digital broadcasting, and hence we as providers do not have the franchise for that. There are no digital TV rates yet and yet they are cutting this already," Dargasa said. "Globe Unicompany did not apply for the same. Their service is in 3G, they have a franchise for that."

The NTC is currently working to make them on digital

Mud wrestling for off-road candidates

Ordinary bus transformed into roving library for schoolchildren

By Charis S. Baker

THIS IS ONE BUS schoolchildren would rather choose to stay in—and it won't be surprising if it goes the road of their teachers and parents.

This is because instead of passengers, the 4-seater bus is now a mobile library. The BookMobile is now loaded with books, fitted with audio-visual equipment and even an electric generator to run the DVD machine and LCD projector for the mobile library.

"The bus is the last piece of the puzzle. We now have everything we need to reach the underserved public elementary schoolchildren and give them access to quality reading and learning materials," said the La

Salle Librarian, Mrs. Maria

The BookMobile is one component of the La Salle BookMobile and Reading Program that operates in Manila and around the country.

Alarming decline

The program seeks to address the alarming decline in reading habits and literacy rate among the less privileged public elementary schoolchildren.

Decline in reading is the Philippines' low rate of literacy. While the country is responsible for the decline in reading, the program promotes the availability of quality materials to the underserved.

It stated that less than half of Filipino schoolchildren who are high school level graduates

How I married my grade-school sweetheart

By Karina Tap-Soto, 26U Correspondent

MARRIAGE IS A SURPRISING 25-year-old would avoid. These were my early, but not for me, I married my grade-school sweetheart two days before turned 25.

Stark and I got together in 1979, when we became classmates in fifth grade at Bonifacio Elementary School in Bonifacio Heights. He was 11, I was 10, I found him cute. And as I would later find out from his friends, he felt the same way about me. Our relationship started as a friendship. I played our relationship would become into something more in the future.

I felt the heavens look down on us as we one we where Stark gave me his first love letter. Finally, a confirmation of our love. Our relationship was finally official. I knew that at fifth grade, that letter meant the world to me.

The letter was everything I had hoped a love letter would be. I felt so happy reading the letter, that my zip turned into action when I read it. As a gesture, he wrote that our love was destined to be about love. He had plans of meeting the necessary in high school.

Meanwhile, I continued myself by thinking, well, at least it was good and not some other girl who could come between us. Still, I prayed God would see he should be my boyfriend. Surely the world just give some other boy that ruling.

In sixth grade, my parents were arrested. The school just began with teachers asking that dreaded question: "What do you want to be when you grow up?" The teacher called on Derek. My heart began to pound. My answer: "A mathematician."

Our class erupted into chaotic laughter.

This was when we started putting each other down, talking on the phone, and exchanging gifts such as toys to his sixth child.

Waste of time

During that high school, I found myself being teased by other guys. But I never really considered them, because I saw them as a waste of time. Then, I believed, he was not going to come to my graduation place.

I also did know Derek's father for me, so he mentioned his parents' wedding for being nice, and he said he was going to be there — through most of my father's life.

Once 1997, junior year, we were all off-campus.

There was graduation night around the corner, Derek said I intended to come to my relationship. Of course it also helped we were entering the same university.

We were perhaps the happiest couple during

our graduation ball, but never because of my wedding to "Derek."

During a relationship through college was taught that we had thought. We began to discover each other's personalities, quirks, pluses and minus. And we did not always see eye to eye. Many times we felt like giving up, but I guess we could say we always found a way because we constantly made that decision to make our relationship work.

Our relationship only got stronger over time. We became such as best friends that we were inseparable. We shared everything: dreams, vision and goals. I knew I loved Derek, and I wanted to spend the rest of my life with him.

Wonderful blessing

Aug. 18, 2008, Derek popped the question, with a beautiful ring in hand. My wife — Derek, our future — was finally coming true!

Together, we planned our wedding. From the concept to the vision, she was in the driver's seat. She was the bride and groom, every detail was made together. And though it was stressful, our wedding planning process, it was the most fun project we've had ever, and it brought us the best to us.

The only photo brought to the ceremony of Sept. 6, 2007 — another wonderful blessing as every vision had come. During the night before and during the night morning I knew because I was up the night before, despite the lack of sleep, I was incredibly happy and relaxed.

I made my way down the aisle with "I Dream of a White Horse Rider" from "Cinderella" being played by our wedding music. I had listened to this song as a child, and it is now my favorite song for my future wedding. A fairy tale because I was marrying my Prince Charming.

Our high school senior returned the ceremony, with family and friends. Friends classmates from grade school and high school as witnesses to our promises of love.

Derek and I realize how blessed we only were only to have found each other after all the time we spent.

And I am thankful because my dream has turned into reality and he's sleeping right beside me. Time for me to put away my notebook and put my husband in driving some more.

Heart-y parties

By Carlos Ledesma
Contributor

AS A YOUNG CHILD I WISHED I WERE one of my younger cousins. This has not been a bad thing. This, when we were up-schooled by the Fleming Foundation in 2000, it was the answer from heaven.

The Fleming Foundation is a non-government organization that provides home care for abandoned and orphaned children, as well as adoption. For this critical period, it's been proven that family care is superior to orphanages in every aspect.

So for the last seven years, we have opened our home to orphaned children who have each spent anywhere between four months and two years with my family. And only two of them are filled with optimism for us. It has also helped the director of my own program in life.

I was trained as a business, but I took up food and beverage (catering) management at the College of Saint Elizabeth. After graduation, I lived in Singapore where I worked in the Guest Services department. Living on this remote and beautiful Pulau Island, surrounded by people delivering such fine services, I realized how I could merge my two passions in life—helping children and organizing events—into one dream job. My company, F&B, is a spin-off of this vision.

F&B is the French word for festival. It is also the name of an event styling company that I started with one of my best friends, Janel Labrador. "F&B" stands for "fun, fast, fun"—these are all the words that can describe my company and the realization of my dream.

We are called F&B: Event Architects. Like the tools of the landscape, parties are the main or highlight in one's life. I have been there (parties have to stand out and just to one's history but in all the parties' memories as well. We are architects and not engineers, because we want to build on our concepts and designs that the market has never seen before, using two words: not just as a checklist.

Through the efforts of F&B, not only do these kids attend the gala nights we organize like something home with them, the better children of the Fleming Foundation (now Fleming Foundation) are the driving force behind F&B, since the foundation receives all our proceeds at its major source of income.

F&B has been able to arrange "dinner in a tent" at several distant locations. For these clients and family, my parents have even allowed me to use my home at 22 Mulberry Road in Puhon Park, free of charge, as long as Fleming Foundation can benefit from it. For them, it could only mean that another child is finding a home, and I am truly grateful to my family for supporting me in this way.

WITH MY friend and business partner, Janel Labrador

My ultimate goal is to put up a giant home where we can take care of many more kids. Thanks to F&B, we are making this a reality for one child at a time.

AUTHOR (frowns, left) with the rest of Canty magazine

The best part about being a Canty girl is that you believe in yourself enough to know that anything is possible

Sweet sweet life

By Mark Miniano
2007 Correspondent

AS A TEENAGER, I WANTED TO BE a lot of things—a teacher (like my mom), a lawyer (because I thought winning power suits and killer heels would be cool), a doctor (I was intrigued, think of all the juicy secret patients could spill!), a model (I grew up on that scene enough because I was stuck at 5'6 1/2), and a dancer (I have no idea where that came from).

But what I really, really wanted was to be a writer for my favorite magazine. I read Canty from the very beginning, since its launching year in 1996. I looked up to the cover girls, looked down the inside in the fashion pages, read the horoscopes over and over again, and daydreamed about my so-called Canty girls (can't spell without, I share that anything else, I submitted the letter behind the magazine). I was a true-blue Canty fan girl.

In the summer of 2004, I was surfing the net when I saw a call for entries to the new issue of the Canty of Good, a group of young Canty writers. I was in my junior year in college, and had a relatively manageable schedule, so I sat down and started writing my application essay.

I struggled with it for days. Was it too long? Too short? Too silly? I considered not sending it in and just waiting for the next batch the following year. But I was already 19 then, and the age limit was 20. The following year would be too late.

It was a chance. Now or never scenario. Swallowing my doubts, I printed out my essay and delivered it personally to Canty headquarters.

A few months later, on a busy Sunday morning, I got a call from then lifestyle editor Mimi Lin. "We read your essay and we loved it," she said, giggling as she said my just-fresh-angin' greek name. She asked me to meet her at a place nearby for my first task, and a couple of days later, confirmed that I had indeed gotten into the contest.

I was thrilled. But looking back, my excitement did not even begin to compare to how Canty changed my life.

In a span of less than two years, I moved from General of Cad member to intern to contributing writer, and I finally landed the editorial assistant position after graduation, officially becoming part of the Canty team—and fulfilling my high-school dream.

After those exciting times, what follows is more hard working to try selling them, how we deal with critics and feedback, and updating them on the latest in music, movies, and celebrities. Canty is every girl's love story. It teaches her to value her relationships with her family and friends, to make her mother that teenage drama and anger are just part of the growing-up process. It helps her become more confident, more comfortable with herself.

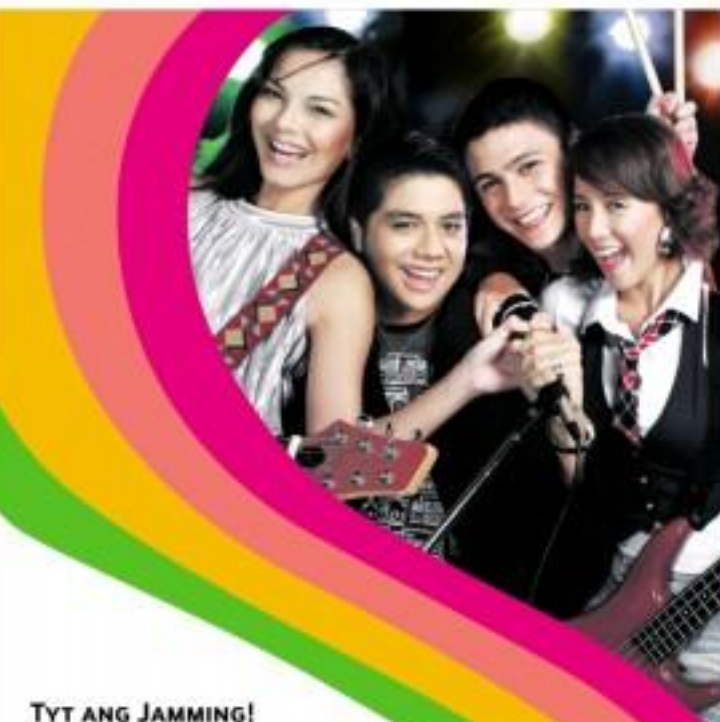

So I did get my high-school dream. And along with it came opportunities for this shy preteenage to step out of her shell, chance to work with the most talented people in the industry and, of course, with eight lovely ladies I can proudly call my friends: Mia, Mimi, Angel, Joanne, Margaret, Sherry, Nick and Shiga.

The Canty team is a happy, very wonderful family and I am extremely blessed to be a part of it.

Right now I still want to be a lot of things. There are more options to explore, new roles to chase and, yes, new dreams to aim for. But the best part about being a Canty girl is that you believe in yourself enough to know that anything is possible.

So there, as well as the lives of the hundreds of teen girls I see, hopefully teaching it my own way—got a little less teenage every day.

Holy crap, that's my name!

While seeing your byline in print can be an ego trip, I see it simply as a form of expression that gets even more fulfilling when kindred souls let you know that they can relate to your published thoughts and feelings

By Mike Mark M. Salinas
JALC Correspondent

WEDNESDAY NAME IN PRINT IS SUCH A surreal experience. It makes you feel fulfilled, alive, validated and, of course, proud, too, all at the same time.

Even as a kid, I already had a desire to see my name in print—not as much as the topic of a news article, but as the writer behind it. I already knew I wanted to be someone who expressed himself through the written word and elicited reaction from his readers.

I remember here, at age 10, I'd made three makeshift newspaper pages by folding pieces of clean bond paper, connecting typing stories or make-up scenarios on them, providing them with suggestive names or pictures of my face or even my own brother, and then stapling the whole stack. More than the actual "newspaper," what made me truly the most satisfying my full name—including my middle initial—appearing on every page as the writer, photographer, illustrator, editor in chief and publisher of my own daily.

My name never faded or paled.

There was no doubt then that the excitement I wanted to join during high school was the school paper. While our adviser assigned me to be sports editor, I took the post and tried to be the best sports editor I could be even if I wasn't the best at it. I was in sports I must have done a pretty good job, because I eventually got the editor in chief position during my senior year.

The whole idea fulfilled me so much that I wanted more of it. I knew it was when I wanted more of it after school.

Hard decision

During freshman year in college, I joined the school paper as a junior writer with my first best friend, however, due to personal and professional conflicts between us which turned really ugly, I had to leave my post and end our friendship.

Living up writing for the school paper was one of the hardest decisions I ever made. While it meant sacrificing what I'd always loved to do and making my dreams disappear, I followed my instincts and my love. At the time, I couldn't handle the editor's handwriting and constant shift of direction was frustrating.

But the writing gods must have been looking after me because less than a month after quitting the school paper, I came across one of the Philippine daily papers. Its youth section was looking for a large batch of correspondents. I made sure I gave it a go.

I got accepted. And that's why for about six years now, I've been seeing my name printed on the country's best newspaper in its almost weekly basis.

My newspaper stint has opened many other doors for me. After a brief stint with a men's magazine, I moved on to a celebrity rag, which I eventually became the editor in chief of.

A line from one of my articles for the paper even got included in a book of gay quotes. Unfortunately, I used a pseudonym for the feature, as my real name wasn't the one that got included. That's the last time I'd ever see an idea.

While seeing your name in print can be an ego trip, I see it simply as a form of expression taking things too far goes even more fulfilling when kindred souls let you know they can relate to your published thoughts and feelings.

Getting published is a dream come true for any writer. I am very grateful to the writing gods for having granted me with an early age and for being real, yes, of course. After all, the only time one is a real writer is when he is real.

CONCEPTS SO DOW

Concepts So Dow is a word game where you use the letters of a word to form other words. The word 'CONCEPTS' is the starting point. You can use any of its letters to form new words, which then become the starting point for the next round. The goal is to use all the letters of the original word in the final round.

Seeing life

they posed in front of ancient statues and buildings from the

However, the benefits of traveling alone were more than made up for the lack of Google photos. It was only because I was alone that I allowed myself to be pulled down my cheeks in the echoing chambers of the Notre Dame Cathedral as I lit a candle and knelt to pray.

It was only because I was alone that I could linger over cups of gelato, letting each sweet morsel wash over my tongue and melt down my throat. It was only because I was alone that I could watch the crowds at Berni's West Fourth sit for hours, or listen to Vinnie's street musicians with-out wondering if I was disrupting someone's schedule.

Without being harmful necessarily make conversation with a companion, I was able to appreciate little things, like how the vibrant blue contrasted with the stark white of the ancient churches. At St. Peter's Basilica, I stood there without counting a word of the Italian around me, but I

None-colored glasses

Traveling around Europe on my own made me see life through new-colored glasses. For a few weeks, I got all of the grins that started my new perspective on life, and marveled at the most simple things. Colors seemed brighter, the air smelled sweeter, and food tasted better because I knew I had to make each moment count.

In all the countries I visited, I had chosen, and plenty of it: aged Parmesan cheese that crumbled as the slightest touch, thick wedges of creamy blue-veined cheese, cheese covered with dried almonds and cracked walnuts.

There was plenty of great wine, fresh fruit, oranges, Wiener schnitzel, and fish, including pink salmon. There was always a special offer. I tried the original southern Italian Verano's Hot Sausage and had thick beefy compound bread with cream in Germany.

If not for all the walking that I had to do, I would have gained 15 pounds. But I promised myself that there would be time to sleep and eat when I got back home. While I was there, I had to enjoy, and that means savoring each spoonful of food, and every waking moment.

In just a few months, I was able to do a lot of things that I'd always wanted to do as a child. I watched the Vietnam Boys' Choir took a crazy winter ride around China (just as Fireplace had done in Winter Holiday); sat on the Spanish steps, took my photo against the Eiffel Tower, and pretended to be a gladiator at the Colosseum, among many others.

There were also things that I never expected to happen...like getting pulled out by roadblocks on the street...that made the most important thing interesting.

As the First Frame ran, I closed a curtain in my flat, closed my eyes, and let it come over the water, thinking with all my might that my heart too wouldn't be so far away.

I mean in Europe, in pursuit of a child, food, drink and come back with more than just a fulfilled wish. The very angle of view in dreams even more, but more importantly, it might be time to fill my imagination.
